2. OBJECTIVES:

According to Mozilla Tech, "WebAssembly is one of the major developments in web platforms in the last decade". This new code can be executed directly by modern internet browsers and offers new performance improvements. WebAssembly is not intended to be directly written, but to be the results of a compiler of well-know languages such as C++, JavaScript, Rust, etc, This new language aims at being faster and more efficient than other languages used in web development. Several papers have been published in top conferences analysing and comparing the performance of WebAssembly and such other languages. In this grant we will develop a similar study focusing on energy consumption.

3. BRIEF PRESENTATION OF THE WORK PROGRAMME AND TRAINING:

The activities plan for this project are:

- Study all recent literature in the área of WebAssembly and Web Development.
- Study all compilers producing WebAssembly from high-level languages, such as C++ and JavaScript.
- Compilation of a representative set of software programs to be analysed when executed from the high-level code and via the WebAssembly code.
- Analysis of the performance results and writing of research paper describing those results.

The tasks described in this working plan demand the application and development of concepts and techniques in the área of Software Engineering which are usually introduced in curricular units included in the curricula of the Mestrados Integrados em Engenharia Informática ou de Mestrado em Engenharia Informática studies.
